THE HARVEST IS WHITE: RAISING UP HARVESTERS

SYG
Summerdale Youth Group
Growing in Faith, Hope and Love

Over the past two weeks, we have been looking at our responsibility as Christians to share the Gospel with those around us. We have discussed the call to harvest and the importance of planting the seed of God's Word. But what about our children? Are we preparing them to do the same? As parents, grandparents, and members of the Lord's church, we have a responsibility not only to teach our children about God but also to prepare them to share His Word with others.

On Sunday evening, Jason reminded us of the importance of being prepared to defend our faith. In 1 Peter 3:15, Peter tells us to "always be ready to give a defense to everyone who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you." This is something we must begin teaching our children at an early age. They need to know more than just the stories of the Bible. They need to understand what they believe, why they believe it, and how to use God's Word to defend those beliefs. We should never discourage our children from asking difficult questions about their faith. Instead, we should encourage them to search the Scriptures and help them find the answers.

However, knowing and defending the truth is only part of our responsibility. We must also teach our children to share it! In Deuteronomy 6:6–7, God commanded the Israelites to teach His words diligently to their children, talking about them throughout their everyday lives. Teaching our children about God cannot be something that happens only on Sunday and Wednesday. It must be part of our daily lives. We should be having conversations about God at home, encouraging our children to talk about their faith with their friends, and most importantly, setting the example by sharing the Gospel ourselves.

Programs like Lads to Leaders provide wonderful opportunities for our children to develop the knowledge and confidence to speak about God's Word. Through Bible study, speeches, Scripture reading, and other activities, they are learning skills that can help them become effective teachers of the Gospel. But those opportunities should not end when they leave the church building. We must encourage them to put those skills into practice in their everyday lives.

Our children are not simply the future of the church. They are part of the church today! We cannot afford to wait until they are teenagers or young adults to begin preparing them to share the Gospel. By then, many are already facing questions about their faith that they may not know how to answer. We must begin teaching them while they are young, helping them develop a faith they understand, can defend, and are willing to share. The harvest is white, and our children have a role to play in gathering it. Let's not wait until tomorrow to prepare them for the work God has given them to do today.

Always remember that you are loved!

Eric

FINDING PERSPECTIVE IN THE LAW:
What the Ten Commandments Reveal About God & Us

Over the past several weeks, we have journeyed through each of the Ten Commandments—examining why they were originally given, how they were observed under the Old Covenant, and what application they hold for us today as New Testament Christians. As we conclude this series this morning (11-15-26), it's easy to look back at the law as merely a list of standard rules. But when we step back, the Ten Commandments offer a far deeper perspective on God's character, human nature, and our need for grace.

What Was the Purpose of the Ten Commandments? The Law of Moses was never meant to be a cold, arbitrary list of restrictions. Instead, it served a rich, multi-layered purpose in redemptive history:

- Record God's Commands (Exodus 20:1–17) – It established the moral baseline and boundaries for the people.
- Reveal God's Character (Exodus 20:18–26) – They reflect the holiness, justice, and purity of the Creator.
- Raise Man's Consciousness (Romans 3:19–20) – The law acts as a mirror, exposing shortcomings and teaching us.
- Reflect Man's Condition (Romans 3:21–23) – It highlights our fallen nature and universal need for salvation.
- Redirect Man's Confidence (Matthew 22:37–40) – The law strips away self-righteousness, shifting our confidence away from our own efforts and pointing us toward love for God, love for neighbor, and reliance on Christ.

Why Did God Make These Commands? God's commands are not reactive; they address the core vulnerabilities of the human heart from the beginning. When we look back at the origins of humanity in Genesis 1–3, we see that even before Sinai, every command was rooted in God's desire for our ultimate good—and every command was broken in the Fall:

- The First Commandment: Broken when humanity chose another god by following Satan over the Creator.
- The Second Commandment: Broken by idolizing the forbidden fruit—making a god out of appetite and desire.
- The Third Commandment: Broken by failing to trust God's warning, taking His holy name and word in vain.
- The Fourth Commandment: Broken by disrupting the sinless rest in which humanity was originally placed.
- The Fifth Commandment: Broken by dishonoring their Heavenly Father through direct rebellion.
- The Sixth Commandment: Broken by introducing spiritual and physical death into the world.
- The Seventh Commandment: Broken through spiritual adultery—preferring created things above the Creator.
- The Eighth Commandment: Broken by taking that which was forbidden and which they had no right to take.
- The Ninth Commandment: Broken by accepting the serpent's false testimony against God's true character.
- The Tenth Commandment: Broken by coveting status, wisdom, and gifts that God had withheld.

The rest of the Book of Genesis continuously documents this pattern of humanity struggling against these divine standards—from Adam and Eve, Cain, Noah, Sodom and Gomorrah, and the encounters involving Abimelech, Abraham, and Isaac. The Ten Commandments do not exist to keep us in bondage; they exist to show us our need for a Savior. When we realize we cannot satisfy the perfection of the Law on our own, we are driven straight to the cross—where Jesus fulfilled the law on our behalf and offers us true redemption.

You Are Loved,
Ray
